What can the Multicultural Resource Center (MRC) do for you?

We act as advocates for students dealing with the complex makeup of a large university. We are eager to meet, talk with, and get to know you.

We work with students in a variety of areas including:

- Study skills, time management, and test-taking strategies
- Interpersonal relationships with peers and family, conflict resolution, and other personal matters
- Careers, internships, graduate and professional school, education abroad, and job opportunities
- Obtaining free tutorial services
- University policies, procedures, and regulations
- Assistance with questions on financial aid, scholarships, and Money management
- Assistance for those who may be targets of bias motivated incidents

Any issue important to you is important to us!

Also, ask how you can become a part of the following groups:

Asian American Students In Action (AASIA)

Mentoring program designed to support Asian and Pacific Islander American (APIA) students who are new to Penn State. Its primary goal is to assist new students in adjusting to University life.

Blends of Traditional Heritages (B.O.T.H.)

Biweekly discussion group for students who classify themselves as biracial/multiracial and share a common African/African American Heritage. Meetings are designed to offer a place for members to share a common experience; be exposed to articles, books, documentaries, etc. that focus on biracial topics; discuss issues related to their experiences with dating, discrimination, family relations, and society expectations; and connect and relate to people like themselves.

Black Male Empowerment Group (BMEG)

The purpose of this group is to give African American males with a shared experience on a majority white campus an opportunity to embrace their Penn State experience, establish community-based strategies, build relationships, and take advantage of all academic and social opportunities within the University.

MRC Leadership Council

A group of ten to twelve MRC students who serve a multifaceted role for the Center. As a group, the Council provides feedback to the MRC staff about perceived needs of multicultural students and serve as MRC ambassadors, representatives, and spokespersons of the MRC mission to MRC students and the greater university community at campus events and within the office.
